AUTHENTIC LEADERSHIP

Many people imagine a business leader as a stern faced, dark suited robot who loses their identity the moment they step out the front door. This is a misconception.

You can successfully develop a personal leadership style that accentuates your personality and also have a very successful business. Gai Waterhouse, Richard Branson and Katie Page are excellent examples of successful leaders who exude their own personality. Their contribution to business symbolises their values and beliefs.

Their authentic leadership style accentuates their strengths and down plays their weaknesses. They surround themselves with people who have competence in areas where they have gaps. Not only is this authentic leadership but it is business savvy. It encourages different strengths in a business and ensures a more rounded management team.

What is your authentic leadership style? Are you using it effectively to harness your business's potential?
